DIGIT-AL - Digital Transformation for Active Citizenship

Supported by:

Erasmus+

EU Youth Programme Priority:

Digital Transformation, Participation in Democratic Life

Topic:

Digital Participation

Youth goals:

Information & Constructive Dialogue, Quality Learning

DIGIT-AL delved into the societal and democratic implications of digitalization through a focus on democracy and human rights education. It produced practical resources, like a facilitator's handbook and policy recommendations, to enhance adult learning. Collaborating with European educational providers and NGOs, the initiative aimed to integrate digital competencies into active citizenship, moving beyond conventional technology use for a more involved societal role.

What is Participation for you?

"For me, participation is about becoming active in creating our own projects, exploring civil initiatives and engaging in democracy-related learning. It's about moving beyond just using digital tools for learning to using them for citizen-led campaigning, self-organisation and enriching encounters at both national and international levels. It's about preparing and empowering individuals to navigate and contribute to the digital transformation in our society."
