Yes to Migration, No to Extremism: A European Educational Journey

Supported by:

Erasmus+

EU Youth Programme Priority:

Inclusion and Diversity

Topic:

Media, Information & Critical Thinking

Youth goals:

Inclusive Societies, Information & Constructive Dialogue, Quality Learning

Erasmus+

The project emerged from a Slovak school's initiative to sharpen students' critical thinking against extremism. Partnering with schools across Europe and NGOs like Amnesty International and Post Bellum, the project engaged students in interactive workshops and cultural exchanges, fostering an understanding of migration and history. It was a collaborative effort where students, educators and various organisations united to address and educate on pressing social issues.

What is Participation for you?

"Participation means belonging to a group of people who spend time together and cooperate on a topic, and share experiences and good practices. Naturally, participation is also about gaining new perspectives."

Wow!

The Yes to Migration, No to Extremism project partnered with Amnesty International and Post Bellum, engaging students and teachers in activities against extremism and in support of migration. The programme set a new trend by collaborating with external experts, like museum guides, to enrich the school's learning environment with diverse insights.
